Part A: Case Study – Cyberbullying

Cyberbullying is a form of online harassment where individuals use digital platforms such as social media, messaging apps, or online forums to insult, threaten, or humiliate others. It is increasingly common among students due to widespread internet usage.

A typical cyberbullying incident begins when a student posts content online. Others may start by making negative comments or jokes. Over time, this can escalate into sharing edited photos, spreading rumors, sending abusive messages, or creating fake profiles to damage the victim's reputation. The anonymity of the internet often encourages such behavior.

A real example of cyberbullying occurred in Ujjain, Madhya Pradesh, where a 16-year-old student, Priyanshu Yadav, faced continuous online harassment. He was targeted with abusive comments and trolling on platforms like Instagram and WhatsApp due to his personal expression. Tragically, the mental pressure became overwhelming, and he died by suicide.

Cyberbullying mainly targets teenagers and young adults, especially those active on social media or perceived as different. Victims often suffer from anxiety, depression, low self-esteem, and poor academic performance. In extreme cases, it can lead to self-harm or suicide.

This case highlights how serious cyberbullying can be and emphasizes the need for awareness, empathy, and responsible online behavior among students.

Part C: Reflection

While researching cyberbullying, what surprised me most was how serious and harmful online harassment can become in a short period of time. I realized that even small jokes or comments can deeply affect someone's mental health. The real-life case made me understand that cyberbullying is not just online fun but a serious issue with real consequences.

As a result, one habit I will personally change is being more mindful about what I post and how I interact with others online. I will avoid engaging in negative discussions and will support anyone facing online harassment by reporting such incidents.
